Afterwards, participants may get their hands wet and touch one of these amazing animals.

Based on past spring break performances, we anticipated 200-300 people at this event, so were surprised and slightly overwhelmed that approximately 400 came for the presentation, with another 250 coming after the presentation started and/or to experience the touch tank.

Participants told us they parked several blocks away. Staff filled a cart with books about sharks and the ocean and walked along the line offering reading material to those waiting for the touch tank. Kids were very excited and happy to see and touch the sharks and for the most part, people seemed patient and understanding about the crowd and long line.
